AMUSEMENTS

"Sweet Clover," the play with which the Grayce Scott Company last night entered upon the twenty-ninth week of its engagement, is so named because of a line in the piece that refers to "moonlight and the smell of sweet clover." True, it might quite as appropriately and reasonably be entitled "Moonlight"—or "Moonshine," for that matter—but anyhow the author, whose name is not given, called it "Sweet Clover" and he doubtless knew its real name.

"Sulffing" In Six Recis.

At the Lyric Theatre this week the Lubin Company, in connection with the Sociological Research Film Corporation, in association with the Sociological Research Film Corporation, in association with the Sociological Fund of the Medical Review of Reviews, and in some sort of co-operation with Mrs. W. K. Vanderbilt's National Campaign, presents "The Drug Terror," or "The Underworld Exposed." And, in spite of the portentous sponsorship under which this six-real shocker is presented, it is some picture. Many of the evils wrought by the use of cocaine and other like drugs are vividly pictured, and to those who have no idea of the extent to which the habit of "sniffing" has grown in some communities, the whole gruesome thing will doubtless come as a revelation. Nor is there any danger that any audience will fail to observe the cause which produces the dreadful effect, for every one of the chronic done there. ence will fail to observe the cause which produces the dreadful effect, for every one of the chronic dope flends that indulge in the habit in the picture makes his indulgence very apparent.

They do not sniff, through a quilt or a spill of paper, the small amount of cocaine mixed with sugar, trional or some other ingredient that is commonly known as "a snift." Not they; they pour on the back of the hand enough raw cocaine to knock out every habitual snifter in the City Jail, and snuff it up greddly with ecstatic fesults. But, for the most part, the picture is well conceived, and is most excellently well acted. The habituals exhibit the ceaseloss itching that is one of the marks of their degradation, and the nervous twitching is not forgotten either, while the drunk-onness, the stupor and the wild rage that follow indulgence in such drugs are all realistically portrayed.

The plot leads to the appalling fate that overtakes a "big seller," when his son-in-law and, later, his daughter become addicted to the habit which he has done so much to spread among men, women and even children. In its development is exhibited every kind of horrible example that can well be imagined, not even excepting some drawn from the very underworld.
